Ruhr City Devastated in Tremendous Assault

Social Planner

Making his first speech on post-war problems since arriving in North America, Sir William Beveridge, noted British economist, last night expressed confidence that his social insurance scheme would be adopted in Britain because the people wanted it. Referring to Canada, Sir William said the same problems of want and sickness existed here, but that the Dominion was quite capable of making its own plans.

Wanted by People

Beveridge Says U.K. Will Adopt Social Scheme

OTTAWA, May 24.—(CP)—Sir William Beveridge, distinguished British economist, last night said he believed his social insurance plan, "something like it" would be adopted in Britain, and declared that Canada and other countries had the same problems of want and sickness as Britain.

"But," he added, "Canada has greater differences of wages and standards of living than Britain and you are quite capable of making your own plans yourselves."

Speaking over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's national network, Sir William said he thought the Beveridge plan in some form would be adopted in Britain because the British people wanted it and what they want they get sooner or later.

FIRST SPEECH

It was the first speech he has made dealing with post-war problems since he arrived recently in North America. He said he had crossed the Atlantic to exchange views about reconstruction problems after the war with people on this continent.

"Winning the war is only a means to an end," he declared in concluding it was the duty of the Allied governments not only to conduct the war but also to make plans for the peace.

The Beveridge plan would not meet all the needs of the post-war world. Reasonable opportunity of working for all and provision of adequate housing would also be major problems. "Avoidance of mass unemployment is the most important of post-war aims," Sir William added.

MAIN POINTS

1.—Beveridge report felt under three main heads, he said. They were:

1.—A comprehensive scheme of social insurance to maintain incomes when they are interrupted by any cause.

2.—A comprehensive health service.

3.—A system of children's allowances paid to parents regardless of whether or not they are earning money by any cause.

Social insurance meant every citizen when earning money should contribute to the fund. Other contributions would be made by employers and by general taxation by the state.

It meant that when earnings were interrupted by any cause, payments were made regardless of the income and without inquiry into other sources of income.

Lowered benefits in the case of people with other means included a "discouragement of idleness."

He said the benefit is a minimum and need not, for any one, be a maximum. Its aim is the abolition of want, by guaranteeing, as a national minimum income, part of the contributions of insured persons and their employers would make the medical service when it was needed, without charge.

Second Attack

5 Jap Bombers Are Shot Down In Raid on Attu

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Five of 10 Japanese twin-engine bombers raiding American forces on Attu in the Aleutians were shot down by United States fighter planes Sunday, the Navy department reported today.

One United States fighter plane is missing and another was shot down in beating off the bomber attack, the second raid is said to have taken place on Saturday. On Saturday, five twin-engine bombers made an unsuccessful raid on two naval vessels.

The Navy gave no indication of whether the bombers succeeded in their mission, presumed to have been bombing and strafing of American troops battling Japanese ground forces on Attu.

THOUGHT INTERRUPTED

It was assumed by some officials, however, that the bombing flight was interrupted before it had opportunity to attack the ground forces.

In the first bombing raid, there was no official word on the base from which the enemy bombers were operating. However, it was assumed that they came either from Paramushiro or from a carrier.

Wounded in Africa

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(CP)—The war department announced today that Sgt. Raymond Deadman, whose mother lives at Calgary, has been wounded in action in the North African area.

CAP BON, Tunisia, May 24.—Enormous supplies of war materials—hundreds of millions of dollars worth of weapons and other equipment—are pouring into North Africa while the Allied armies reorganize for the next task.

In a trip among the troops along the North African front, this correspondent gained the impression that the chances of slipping through Europe's soft underbelly are more promising than when the Allied prospect of clearing the enemy from Tunisia three months ago.

First Marshal Sirwin Rommel, driven from North Africa, appears to have been given a "bitter" job of building a "strong" line of fortifications at vital points along the Axis front through Italy to the Balkans.

305 Axis Planes Four-Day Toll

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, May 24.—Allied air squadrons landed docks and airfields on the Italian peninsula during the last four days of the offensive, while bombers in the middle east command swept the Aegean sea and hammered the Italian port of San Giovanni.

American bombers and fighter-

bombers bombed Pantelleria three times during the last four days, and followed Sunday night by R.A.F. Wellington bombers, which dumped 4,000-pound bombs on the same target. U.S. lightnings raided Sicilian towns. The destruction of 305 Axis planes in four days of Mediterranean offensive was reflected in lack of opposition during the night attacks by the American lightnings. Bombers and other aircraft in Sicily were reported.

Canadians, R.A.F. Hit Dortmund With 2,000 Tons Bombs

By WILLIAM B. DICKINSON
Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin
Copyright, 1943, by British United Press

LONDON, May 24.—A Canadian and British armada apparently numbering close to 1,000 aircraft smashed the big Nazi industrial centre of Dortmund in the flood-damaged Ruhr valley during the night with the largest tonnage—more than 4,000,000 pounds—of high explosives ever dropped in a single raid.

The dumping of more than 2,000 tons of bombs on Dortmund's electric, steel, coal and other war works added to the Ruhr Valley havoc caused by R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. bombing three days, which lashed flood waters on German industrial centres including the Dortmund area.

Three out of every four of the R.A.F., R.C.A.F. planes in the armada, which was said to be not far short of 1,000 were four-engine craft, it was reported unofficially.

Piots reported that "something really big" blew up with a tremendous explosion during the raid, which started huge fires in the western part of Dortmund.

Greatest Ever Staged Anywhere

Despite lack of details, there apparently was no question that the attack was the greatest ever staged by an air force anywhere. It climaxed a series of "record" raids by the R.A.F., R.C.A.F. and American air forces in the steadily expanding pre-invasion onslaught against Axis Europe.

A German broadcast of a trans-ocean news agency dispatched said that "competent quarters" in Berlin acknowledged "casualties and heavy damage" at Dortmund.

Thirty-eight planes were lost in the attack, four of them Canadian.

However, the air ministry said, vast billowing fires were left burning among the war factories turning out the weapons which Hitler hoped to fend off the impending Allied invasion.

The London Star estimated the total number of planes used "was not far short of 1,000." Their target was one of the cities reported R.A.F. bombing of three dams which retained flood water in the Ruhr valley.

Preliminary reports said the raid was well concentrated, though the targets in the latter stages of the raid were obscured by smoke that mushroomed to 15,000 feet. Anti-aircraft fire was fairly intense at the start of the attack, but died down as the weight of bombs saturated the defenses.

William Aberhart—The Man

William Aberhart has passed on, and an era has come to an end in Alberta. That does not mean that the principles for which Mr. Aberhart stood or the party which he founded will share his dissolution. Principles are eternal. And parties survive individuals.

But the era that ends is the era of the colorful and bold, the era of the history of this province which was dominated by an impressive and fascinating personality. For no one can deny the late premier's personal magnetism and his leadership. He was beloved. He was never ignored.

That mysterious process of death by which the human soul is lifted out of the dust and grime and earthly attachments to a definite and unanswerable thing. It cuts off the individual forever from the affairs of earth. So that when one comes to measure the qualities of the departed, one must make a nice decision between those things which were Caesar's and those things which were God's.

One must consider, not the doctrines held by the person who has passed on, but the purity of his intentions. One must recall, not his temporal accomplishments, but the things that were in his heart.

In brief, it is necessary to think, not of William Aberhart, the Social Credit leader, but of William Aberhart the politician, not of William Aberhart the politician, but of William Aberhart the man. Death has divorced him from everything but his manhood. That is all that matters now.

The late premier will live in the annals of this country because of his great humanity.

Whatever his obsessions, whatever his political acts, whatever his economic creed, that will be his final tribute—that he loved his fellow man.

Everything in his life pointed to it. Everything he said and did was said and done towards that end.

For twenty-five years he served as principal of a successful high school. Teaching is an act of love.

And through the experience gained in that capacity, he was able to give to the finest educational system in Canada. And education is an act of faith.

In the hour of his death, it is not important to consider the legislation he gave this province. But it is important to remember that that social legislation was the work of a man who had sympathy for the aged and the sick and the helpless.

That will be his epitaph, whatever one may think of his politics, that he was the champion of the oppressed.

There is something about such a career that transcends the achievements of statesmanship, something finer and more eternal than the empty phrase of politics. He loved his fellow man.

Empire Day

"The 24th" is one of the national holidays which under stress of war conditions have been struck out of the calendar. But outside war industries and Dominion offices this will make little difference.

Popular custom is strong, and the "Queen's Birthday" is one of the most cherished of our national holidays. It is long since became an institution, rather than an occasion for observance in response to official order or suggestion. Whatever the reason, it is the wish of parliament or government, the folk will explode their fire-crackers in accord with long-standing tradition, and their children will be given a good work and give the day to picnics, fishing expeditions, sports—and Victory Gardens.

Nor is there any danger that the deep significance of Empire Day will be forgotten, either by those who work or by those who play. From the British Isles to Burma, from Alaska to Australia, on every sea and under every sky, the forces of the Empire on land, sea and in the air are fighting for its life. Few are the families in Canada from whom one could expect to go to stand in place of danger. In the work-shops where the wheels keep turning today are being shaped the tools which our hands and our arms will use to support the farms where seedling must go on, war work of a vital character is being done. These are factors which draw the thoughts of the people of all classes and sections to the remarkable political structure to which this day is dedicated, and in which Canadians more than ever before feel thankful and proud to hold citizenship.

Russia gets in Line

From Moscow comes welcome word that the Communist party has dissolved its militant International. In plain language this means that the Soviet has renounced its former policy of support of propaganda agencies in foreign countries. That will strengthen and invigorate pro-Russian sentiment in all the Allied states.

Canada has announced that it will support the same claim that in helping Russia the democracies are helping toward the communication of Europe. Russia, in so many words, has announced that it will not attend strictly to its own business and let other nations do the same.

Whether or not suggested by President Roosevelt's letter to Premier Stalin, this decision is timely. There would be no point in ignoring the fact that people in the de-mocracies have been wondering how far Russia would go in accepting this whole-some doctrine, and how far there was an element of truth in the Hitler assertion that Moscow was but a puppet of the agencies of disruption in the Reich and the occupied countries. These uncertainties have now been set at rest. The formal declaration that support is withdrawn from missionary effort abroad removes any cause for misgiving among Russia's Allies and leaves the stock enemy propaganda meaningless.

This announcement marks a definite change in Russian foreign policy, not less real because there have been signs that the change was coming. The action undoubtedly accords with and proceeds from a basic change in the Russian conception of international relationships and responsibilities. The ideal of "world revolution," enthusiastically proclaimed when the Soviet system was young, has been formally and officially renounced. Russia stands now squarely on the basis of each nation's right to freedom from outside interference. That is what the democracies are fighting for, and what the Axis powers have undertaken to destroy.

If, as suggested a few days ago, there was a "diplomatic offensive" under way, this was the beginning of it. The Allies have a view to taking Italy out of the war, the Allied armies in the Mediterranean zone are not leaving the diplomats to do the work of taking Italy out of the war, the Allied armies in the Mediterranean zone are not leaving the diplomats to do the work of taking Italy out of the war, the Allied armies in the Mediterranean zone are not leaving the diplomats to do the work of taking Italy out of the war.

Canada's Aluminum Production Keeps Pace with Swiftly Mounting Needs of War Arvida and Kingston Plants Pour Out Forty Percent of United Nations Supply

At Arvida, where the aluminum is extracted from Bauxite ore, the chimneys of the potrooms stretch endlessly into the distance. Canada produces 40 percent of United Nations aluminum supply, ships metal to Britain and United States.

Sunlight streams into the dusty potroom of the Arvida plant in the dramatic picture above. Crane operator is just moving up to transfer molten metal from large furnaces to the smaller pots at

Pouring ingots. The silvery liquid spills from a furnace into molds that move on a revolving table. Then they are sent on to Kingston for processing.

Kingston plant is a modern streamlined structure, probably the most up-to-date Aluminum plant in the world. Here raw ingots are received for processing into the sinews of war: into airplane propellers, sheet aluminum, bars and tubes for airplane parts for which most of factory's production is destined.

Bloom inspection is the job of Dorothea McKay, who works at the Kingston plant. Every process of manufacture is rigorously inspected by trained staff.

Heat treating of aluminum sheets which have been rolled to wafer thinness.

This is Dorothy Partis' eye looking at you through an aluminum tube she is inspecting. Kingston plant works on round-the-clock shifts rolling out vital war material. Quebec's power plus British Guiana's bauxite, Greenland cryolite, Newfoundland fluorapatite have given us greatly increased aircraft production.

BETH CARTER, WAAC

By LORETTE COOPER

THE STORY: Beth Carter, WAAC, is Major Betty Jackson's "one-man" staff on the tiny command post of the Coast Artillery Battery in the Pacific. The duty of the command post is to maintain a constant radio connection with the fleet. The duty of the command post is to maintain a constant radio connection with the fleet. The duty of the command post is to maintain a constant radio connection with the fleet.

CHAPTER VII
THE next day Beth began her duties. She arose at 6:15 and breakfasted at 7. At 8 o'clock she was at a desk in the officer's adjacent to Betty Jackson's.

"Good morning," he greeted, smiling.
"Hello," she replied. "I'm ready for work, sir."
"That's fine," Beth he beamed. "I'm really sorry about last night. To tell you the truth, I was rather surprised by the whole affair. I'm quite at a loss when more than one lady is present."
"Of course, you wouldn't be if only one were present," Beth said, a slight twinkle of amusement marking the corners of her eyes. They both laughed.

"You're well," Beth said. "Now let's get down to work."
"Fine, Beth."
On top of her desk were some papers, arranged in stacks, with bright yellow tabs. They were through them together. It was not long before she realized why her task was so secret and so important. Here was a master plan—no such plan as it was in "plan" form, but it was in its outline a plan anyway—for a tremendous phase of the South Pacific war, and for eventually carrying that war straight to Tokyo.

HOLD EVERYTHING

Beth concentrated so completely on her work that she hardly knew when lunchtime came—and when it did, she asked an orderly to send some coffee and a sandwich to her desk.
In mid-afternoon, she had progressed enough so that she felt that accomplishment was going on by evening. She relaxed a moment, and as she did so, she realized that conversation was going on in Betty's office.

Lita Danton was talking, and her shrill voice penetrated the doorway capably. That joined the officers just as though there were no barrier between them.

LAFF A-DAY

"I don't need a pail when I'm just practicing, do I?"

CURIOUS WORLD

THE SPINY ANTEATER, FOUND AROUND PORT MORESBY, NEW GUINEA, AND AUSTRALIA, IS ONE OF THE TWO RESERVING MAMMALS KNOWN TO SCIENCE. IT LAYS ONLY ONE EGG A YEAR, AND CARRIES IT IN A POCKET UNTIL IT HATCHES.

NEVADA HAS ONLY ONE PARADISE PER SQUARE MILE, WHILE BRITISH ISLAND HAS 500 PARADISES PER SQUARE MILE.

"We're Americans and we're entitled to courteous treatment and quick passage. We don't come here deliberately. We got lost. Now listen here, Brit. I'm going to lose my job and Rick Mott will lose his. If we aren't Auckland in another few hours you've got to let us go."
"You're kidding me?" Beth asked.
"Yes," Lita's indignant tone changed. She could not conceal her delight.
So Lita Danton was with a man named Rick Mott. Beth wondered what he looked like. Now she heard his voice.
"Thank you so much, Major Jackson," a man said. "I felt Lita Danton could convince you. Very embarrassing for our plane to be astray—but we feel fortunate we found an island and that we did not get lost on the waves."
Beth heard a door open and close. Then Rick entered her office.

"Darned bad," Beth said. "Those two certainly put me in an odd place. I suppose I'm going to have to let them go. He told me through the papers on which Beth was getting along fine. You're almost a single sentence stood out at a time as if he had printed in block capitals. You will take every precaution, particularly against any enemy from within, whom, for want of more concrete information, we cannot at present name."
"I meant to ask you," Beth said, "whether you see anything or anyone yet who excited your suspicion?"
Beth's mind instantaneously reverted to Lita Danton's unexpected (or was it?) appearance. She almost said, "Lita Danton." But she did not. She silently taunted herself for knowing jealousy to overcome reason.
"No," Beth said.
"The sure and tell me if you do," Beth said.
Beth went to work. Her first task was to digest out of each of the papers its prime reason for existence. It was Beth's order that the sum of all the information should go into a single page of typewritten matter. Once it was thus condensed, all of the original matter was to be destroyed. Beth was told that if she could finish her job by evening, the originals could be burned when certain other documents were burned under official supervision the next day.

that idea and have one harmonious accord. Much cultivation was needed so that the hate can be taken out of the world.
WILL BE MARRIED
So long as we hate our neighbors in Canada because of creed and speech, hatred will exist in the world. The Russian people are pulling together as one and there is no creed of hatred in their country, he continued.

"It is my hope that Canadians will not look upon their neighbors as Chinks, Japs, and so on, but as God's people. God is eternal, he is the spirit of life. If you have that spirit you have love and righteousness. The God in us is the eternal light. God is always trying to inspire people. We must believe these words and live them."
As the parade proceeded down Jasper Avenue it was witnessed by hundreds of people, many of whom followed it to the Parliament Buildings. Four city bands, the Canadian Legion pipe band, the Edmonton boys' pipe band, No. 4 Initial Training school band and the No. 3 "M" depot band supplied the marching airs for the parade. At the grounds the station Army band played several selections.

IN PARADE
In the parade itself were armed from No. 4 I.T.S., No. 3 "M" depot, members of the R.C.N.V.R., officials of the Highland Games Association, the chaplain, T. H. Campbell, the Legion of Frontiersmen, St. John's Ambulance Association and a number of Edmonton Highland dancers.
The ceremonies were Jack Strachan. Officials on the stand included Arthur B. Miller, president of the association, Mr. Campbell, Ronald J. Gillis, A. J. McCormack, R. T. Anderson, A. Stewart, Donald Mackay, J. Macdonald, R. J. Jamieson, A. Bichan, John C. McDougall and officers of the R.C.A.F. and R.C.N.V.R.

Fierce Fighting Rages in Balkans

LONDON, May 24.—(CP)—Fighting is raging over a large part of Bosnia and Montenegro in the Balkans, with particularly bloody clashes in Montenegro where the Germans reinforced Italian forces after Yugoslav fighters killed and captured one entire Fascist garrison numbering 313 men. The Yugoslav government announced Saturday.

The Italian garrison was reported destroyed by forces of Gen. Drago Mihailovic which moved down the Merga river and encircled the town of Rieck last Sunday.

The announcement said the patriots now were threatening Podgorica, the main Montenegro garrison of the Italians, eight miles from Rieck.

Another 300 Axis troops were reported killed in the Bitoljok-Mojkovce area, 40 miles northwest of Podgorica between May 12 and May 18.

Ceiling Ordered On Live Poultry

By Prices Board

OTTAWA, May 24.—(CP)—The Prices Board Saturday announced the foods administration has placed a ceiling on live poultry.

In each province the maximum price at which live birds may be sold is related to the price of corresponding kinds of dressed poultry.
The maximum wholesale price of live birds will be 25 cents a pound in Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia; 21 cents in Manitoba and Alberta; 20 cents in Saskatchewan; and 25 cents in the Maritime provinces.
Building societies in Britain have worked out a post-war scheme whereby money will be loaned to people wishing to build houses for letting. Only owner-occupiers previously could obtain loans.

Dress Rehearsal

The Story of Dieppe

By Quentin Reynolds

Copyright, 1944, by Random House Inc.

This is twenty-second instalment of Quentin Reynolds' latest book "Dress Rehearsal," for which The Bulletin has secured exclusive publication rights. This book by the famous war correspondent is a stirring epic account of the raid on Dieppe—the first air-land-sea performance in European theatre of war.—EDITOR.

Chapter XI.

From the deck we could see the ships retreating. Our destroyer turned in toward the shore. Three ugly columns of smoke arose from Dieppe. The men who had penetrated the beach had left their mark there. But we knew that there were some men still on the beaches or in the water close to the beaches. We went in as close as the destroyer could get without grounding. We were so close that they turned their machine guns on us. We could hear the staccato bark of the guns and then hear the bullets splattering on our steel hull. It was only to find cover. We stood behind gun screens or bulkheads, and the bullets rattled against them. Machine-gun bullets could do no harm to a destroyer. Steel plates arose about neck high on the bridge and the men there crouched a bit to escape the bullets. Now and then someone spotted men clinging to wreckage or to rafts. We steamed slowly to them and they were hoisted aboard.

The shelling was bad now because they had us alone. Before there had been more than two hundred tanks. Now there was but one—ourselves. The shells struck close and then threw up spurts of water. This all seemed so familiar now that we hardly noted it.

We steamed past Dieppe and went on to the beaches on the right. The Luftwaffe still kept trying. It seemed, in fact, as though they had reduced their efforts now that they had us alone.

I was standing just outside the passageway amidships, where I was firing furiously, but suddenly above them came a new noise—a noise that having heard once you never forget. I looked up and to the rear. A plane had gotten through the umbrella of Spitfires. It was hurtling itself downward at us, and four angry, baffled Spitfires chased it. This was a Focke-Wulf 190. I stood, frozen, and so did the men around me. The sound of a diving airplane coming to a landing is a terrifying thing. It came to 500 to 300 feet in a few seconds; it leveled off and raked us from stern to bow with its eight guns and then it dropped a bomb. This was the time a Focke-Wulf had never been used as a dive bomber. The air was full of roaring noise, and I lunged backwards and through the passageway. I lay there on my back, listening to the world coming to an end. The confusion raged in my ears and the machine guns and cannon roared and then the sharp clink of bullets hitting and ricocheting from one one man. He was a man. He was the drink away.

"You're old enough to drink in a ditch," I added. He looked at me fully, and I was afraid he was going to cave in.

HE SAID IT OUT. "There was a man. There was a cup on the table. I raised it with a glass of beer. I drank it. The floor and filled the cup again I put it to his lips. He spit it out and looked reproachfully at me."

"There was brandy in that," he said. "So help me, there wasn't. I rinsed the cup. I'll rinse it again. I did and filled it with water, and he could still taste brandy. The cup had been used for brandy before. Someone came in and said 'There had got to be brandy in it.' I fingered the little gold ring in my pocket and for a moment was proud. I'd been standing with four men. Two of them were dead, the two others seriously wounded. I had only left a solid line. I tried to reach and hold some serious thought on this. What had I been saved for? But the thought eluded me. When you have cold calls like that your reaction doesn't come until later.

DETAILS AREN'T IMPORTANT. You don't dream yourself or your reactions at the time you do that later, when you've had a chance to think about and imagine reactions that had then which you now think you remember. But I stood there, puzzled, not thinking anything much or feeling anything. I wondered why I had I had flung myself through the passageway or whether the blast had shocked me through the door. It didn't matter—details aren't important in a spot like that. The only thing that matters is that you aren't hurt.

After awhile I went on deck again. We'd been here nearly nine hours now and everyone was tired. There was no spontaneous shouting among the gun crews when they merely loaded the guns and fired automatically. A body can take a terrific beating a body is practically indestructible. But nerves can't. After awhile I went on deck again. We'd been here nearly nine hours now and everyone was tired. all get that when you were brief. The Hun might have a few Spitfires, you know, which they could use to drop right down on us. That was the form today—200 feet."

"Yeah, they told us to stay over 2000 feet or risk getting piped," he said. "But what the hell could I do? I got hit over Dieppe. A direct hit on my motor and it knocked out. I either had to bail out over the city or try to sit down near you. So I tried that, and my God, those ack-ack shells were close. What the hell were they using?"

"They threw the book at you: four inch, Cerberus, and, when you got closer, pom-poms. By the way, I asked, 'Change the subject. How do you like that aircraft?'"

GOOD AIRCRAFT? "A good aircraft," he growled defensively, as though to stop anyone from criticizing it. "Especially for the job, which is army cooperation. Today we kept flying over the runway back in Dieppe, spotting any reinforcements they tried to send up from the rear. When we saw anything we machine-gunned it and report. Down low this is the fastest airplane in the world. Up to sixteen thousand feet, anything, even a Focke-Wulf. I've flown them all, but I like this aircraft them all."

A great deal of nonsense has been talked and written about American airplanes. Most of this has come from the typewriter. Strategists who use their information from blueprints and specifications. As you can only take a look at the performance of airplanes in the different light than do the pilots. I've talked to a pilot who's been over the world about the planes they fly and they were dependent upon well the planes are and how fast they are and how maneuverable, and they look at the performance of airplanes in a different light than do the pilots. Our guns swung to port and raked a hundred times before. I watched the path of the shells and the bursts which studied the sky like slowly opening black blossoms. This plane was high over Dieppe, and it seemed to be aiming for us. It was hard even to be frightened now—only felt a weary apathy. With our curiosity, I again wondered why our Spitfires didn't go after it. They kept circling above the plane. The bursts in the air gave me a sense of the guns firing. The plane was almost square, stubby wing tips—Messerschmitt-109. It came closer, and it seemed to be aiming for us. It was hard even to be frightened now—only felt a weary apathy.
